

Cloud Native Streaming Platform Netflix-inspired

Santiago Antonio Gualteros Bustos

Nicolas Castro Rivera

Andrés

Erick Santiago Buitrago Peña

1 Executive Summary

Netflix is a streaming platform that provides this service for subscriptions. Whose vision is entertaining users through series and movies. This content can be accessed around the world by millions of users those who want to watch their shows and favorites at any time. For that reason is an application demands great availability, good performance with heavy content such as multimedia and personalized experience with assertive recommendations.

2 System Description

Business problem, actor catalog, use case definitions, and system boundary diagram

2.1 Business Problem

Netflix solves the problem of providing a large amount of audiovisual content to millions of users through the internet while giving each user a convenient and personalized experience.

Users want to watch movies and series whenever and wherever they want without having to download the entire content beforehand. At the same time, Netflix needs to help users find something they want to watch among a very large catalog.

The platform provide another services that not will be consider in this project like: Option for subtitles, interactive experiences or content preview.

2.2 Actors

Subsection example 1

2.3 Main Use Cases

Subsection example 2

2.4 System Boundaries

Subsection example 2

3 Functional Requirements

Numbered catalog of 8–12 functional requirements organized by domain

4 Non-Functional Requirements

Numbered catalog of measurable non-functional requirements per category

5 Workload Model

Structured table with all workload parameters and justification for each value

References

- [1] Rummery, G. A., & Niranjan, M. (1994). On-line Q-learning using connectionist systems. Technical Report, Cambridge University Engineering Department.